Spring shades

The lightweight sweaters for spring from French knitwear company Eric Bompard are in cashmere/2 extra-fine ply and come in cool colours, too. This zip-collared turtleneck is a hefty £290 but super quality, and would make the perfect gift (eric-bompard.com).

Lightening up

Barbour has launched a new range of lightweight jackets. They're in the brand's traditional waxed cotton, but the company claims that a new blend of waxes and oils has made the jackets 30 per lighter. The Royston navy bomber jacket, far left, is £179, brown Ogston jacket, above right, is £229, and long camel Harrier jacket, left, £219 (barbour.com/uk).

5 reasons why we love... Naim Uniti Atom

1. It's a mighty plug-in-and-play music system that just needs speakers.
2. Its network storage device lets you rip up to 16,000 CD-quality albums ...
3. ... and it connects to wifi to stream from PC or Mac or get internet radio.
4. It has a 40-bit SHARC digital processor to remove "jitter" timing errors.
5. Sound quality is terrific, from an amplifier that produces 40 watts per channel (£1,999; naimaudio.com).

DEEP TIME

British watch company Farer has launched a collection of three GMT automatics. The Wayfarer, Seafarer and Farfarer watches, £1,175, have a 21-jewel ETA 2893-2 movement and "super-compressor" case that makes the watch more water-resistant the deeper it goes (farer.com).
